In the interest of improving security, Northwestern University Information Technology (NUIT) is changing the default access to NUIT and Library computer facilities.

As of Friday, July 8, University staff who wish to access the Library's public computer labs, including the Information Commons, will need to change their NetID passwords using a new option on the NUIT "Add or Remove a NetID Service" Web page at <https://snap.it.northwestern.edu/it/snaps/newservice.cgi>.

Once the password change is made, staff will be able to access computers in the NUIT and Library labs by logging on with their NetID and (new) password. No NetID authentication is required to access the Library online catalog (NUcat) and other online services, or to borrow Library materials.

This one-time password change does not apply to faculty, students, Library staff, Feinberg School of Medicine residents, the Institute for Learning in Retirement, Center for Talent Development students, or students taking part in the National High School Institute.

Please visit "What's New and Changing with Technology @ NU" at <http://www.it.northwestern.edu/transitions> for detailed information.

Please direct any questions to the NUIT Support Center at 847-491-HELP (4357) or e-mail consultant@northwestern.edu.
